PILGRIMS TO LOURDES. Strange Case of a Little Girl.

At ten o'clock on the morning of Sept. 11 an interesting batch of passengers left Charing Cross for the Continent. They numbered 112, and travelled direct to Lourdes, under the suspices of the Roman Catholic Association.

These voluntary travellers are pilgrims, and their object is to worship at the grotto of Massablolle, where the Virgin Mary is believed by many Roman Catholics to have revealed herself repeatedly to a peasant girl named Bernadette Soubirous in the year 1858. Some thirty of the pilgrims in question are confirmed invalids, suffering from paralysis, or epilepsy, or desiness, who hope by their devotions and the aid of some mir culous water there to regain normal health. With the exception of a few whose circumstances are not such as to permit the expense of the trip, and whose fares are paid by the association, every one provides for his or her own expenses, which are, however, on a reduced scale. A certain amount of pathos attaches to one section of the party, which came from Ireland to join the pilgrimage. It consists of a father, a mother, and a little five-year old daughter. The little girl was stricken, 9. so the story goes, with what some medical men considered to be an incurable malady; but prayers to "Our Lady of Lourdes" resulted in a complete cure. The parents. 000 who can ill afford the journey, are so over juyed at this, that they ere, at their own expense, travelling to Lourdes to return

Lourdes is a little French town that has grown up around what was originally a Roman castellum, and subsequently a feudal castle, picturesquely situated on the summir of a bare, scraped rock. Near the town are marble quarries employing over six hundred workpeople, and forty state quarries give occupation to three hundre, more. The pastures of this highly THERNATIONAL DAMBIED picturesque peighbourhood support a breed valued in South Western France. There is naturally, a considerable trade in locally manufactured reseries and other objects of piety, as well as in the wonder working water of the pool. The residential population of Lourdes is 85 0, but the pilgrim season, while is lasts, usually brings in a flusting population of some 500,000 people, who have to be accommodated in tente. have and other temporary structures.

PRICE OF SILVER

Reasons for the Rise.

It is of interest says the Sydney Morning Herald, to review the causes that have operated in the direction of hardening silver values. There is no doubt that the course of events since 1902, therefore, has neg atived the belief, then generally held, that silver would continue to decline in gold value. The supply had been for many years nearly constant, and had exceeded the demand at the old prices. The German Imperial Government sold at one time large amounts of silver, and still retained enough to execute all its subsidary coinage down to a recent date. The Government of the 20 | United States also not only suspended in 1893 regular purchases of siver, but availed itself of an accumulated stock of metal for its subsidiary coinage, while the Governments of the Latin Union, in providing for new subsidiary coinage, coined up their existing 5 franc pieces. Thus these Gov. ernments withdrew from the silver market, and the chief outlets remaining for the metal were found in India and the Orient. With the exhaustion or reduction of these old stocks occurred a considerable change in the demand for silver. All the Governments which had been using their old silver have appeared in the market, or will soon appear, as purchasers of bullion. The war between Russia and Japan called for large amounts of silver in Manchuria, and while this demand was in a sense temporary, the The London Joint Stock Bank, Limited, silver absorbed there seems to be finding its way into circulation in different parts of China and the East, instead of returning upon the bullion market. The Government of British India, moreover, has continuously made large purchases of silver since the surumn of 1903, and indicated to the Commission on International Exchange in 1904 that these purchases were being made with comparative regularity. Sti more recently, a fund, known as the "Special Ingot Reserve," has been accumulated in London by the Indian Government, with the avowed purpose of being prepared to meet coinage demands in India promptly when they arose. The last Indian financial statement states that experience has shown that the amount of this reserve "originally fixed was not large enough, and it has been decided that its amount shall be doubled." The adoption of this policy in India has been a natural result of the great expansion of the crop-shipping area by the extension of the railway network, and there are at present no indications of a cessation of the demand RESERVE FUND Fl. 5,000,000 (£ 417,000). for the white metal in India. STEAMERS REFLOATED:

The "Kinshan" has been high and dry ever since the typhoon of September 18th. but notwithstanding the lengthy period suffered - none but minor damages and at once. SIR CLAUDE MACDONALD ON this personal service develops qualities of BRITISH TRADE.

Sir Claude Macdonald, on the eve of his departure from Japan, was entertained at Yokohanin by the British Association. His Excellency said : One of the speakers at the inaugural meeting of the British Association of Japan mentioned that he remembered the time when both the British' representatives thought it was more or less infa dig, or acted as if they did, to take any special interest in matters affecting British trade, especially those affecting firms personally: I have a high opinion of that particular speaker, and therefore I take his words as Gospel-I assure him, and you, centlemen, the times are changed. It is a very real and a very genuine pleasure to me to push the interests of British trade and commerce for all I am worth (Hear, hear and applause,) and I can also assure you if did not do my duty in this respect I should soon hear of it from the Government of His Majesty. I think I can safely say that there is not a single firm or banking institution represented here to day with which I have not had pleasant relations and done my best to help when they have come to me. (Applause). I am reminded of a rather good story which somewhat bears upon this and which was told me by a member of the Liverpool Chumber of Commerce when I sums forwarded towards the relief of the was enjoying their hospitality on my return sufferers by the typhoon and hand their from the West Coast of Africa. An Englishman once helped a Scot who was in a tight place, or rather it was the Scot who helped the Englishman, and in expressing his gratitude the Englishman said, "I ever you are in trouble come to me and if you are in the right I will pull you through. Oh! damn the reight," said the Scot, oft is when I am in the wrong I am wanting the help." (Prolonged laughter). I liasten treadd that our Yokohama friends always were in the right (Laughter); anyway their complaints have been most temperately and courteously put. (Hear, (hear.) I know that there is a general sort of idea that Ambassadors, Ministers Plenipotentiary and diplomats generally have a right royal time, with nothing to Too, but can assure you, gentlemen, this is not the case. Some witty and quite untrustworthy person has said that Ambassadors are sent abroad to lie for the bought of their country. (Laughter.) This is very unkind and quite untrue. (Renewed laughter.) A late military attaché of the Legation, who was well known to many of you, was so moved by this unjust aspersion that he broke into the following verses. The first stanza is not relevant but it leads up to the second, so I give it :

in pouring. Abuse upon the tourist and his guide, When the tourist isn't occupied in tour-

British Association of Japan, of which I follows :- Stonecutters Island is supposed am proud to be an honorary member and to have been seized by a band of pirates, the first honorary member. "As you are represented by 80 men of the Royal aware, the first object of this Association West Kent Regiment, and it will be the is to represent, express and give effect to Volunteers' duty to regain possession of it the opinion of the British community in their political, commercial and general interests connected with Japan and to'do bounds. The attacking force consisting of all such thing as may be conducive to the 40 men of the Royal West Kents and the protection and extension of British trade, commerce and general interest. Gentlemen, these are excellent objects, and it is a right good thing that Britishers have Colonel Darling, Officer Commanding combined to endeavour to bring them about. (Hear, hear). I notice that the general interests of our Empire are mentioned; therefore it is right that every: body who has the welfare of the Empire at heart and is resident in Japan should support this Association, which is not, as' has been pointed out, an association of firms, only, but an association of all Britishers, who should stand shoulder to shoulder and unite for the common national good. And therefore it is, gentlemen, Excellency the Governor and 24 other that I trust the British Association will Officials, senior officers of the Garrison and not in Japan be confined to Yokohama, but that in Kobe, and other places where two or three Britons are gathered together they will combine to further the excellent objects for which this Association is formed. Competition is keen, gentlemen, and where we are concerned it should be a case of "each for all and all for each." (Hear, hear and applause.) There is one other point which I would like to bring to your notice to-day. At the inaugural meeting of the Society in July, one of the most able and enterprising members of the Yokohama community spoke as [follows :-- "While willing and desiring to work with our fellow residents of other nationalities. I cannot refrain from bringing to your attention the old motto "that trade flying bravely, if indeed at all, unless we following manner :recognise that it is the absolute duty of A Final Dividend of 7 per cent. on the every citizen of this Empire to take part in the defence of that flag and to be so trained that he can do so effectively. (Applause). I, for one, am entirely in accord with Lord Milner, who is an out and out believer in the doctrine that "a great nation should rely for its protection upon its whole manhood and not upon a limited professional class," and I agree with him that "a people prepared to undergo trouble and face danger by pergonal service would outstrip, not only in discipline, order, method, and a sense of duty-duty to oneself, duty to one's employers—qualities as useful in business as in any other walk of life. (Applause) In the matter of this training I speak feel ingly, for, as some of you know, I was in a ticht place in Peking. Well, gentlemen the material was there, the fighting spirit was there, the British pluck was there, but the training was not. THE VOLUNTEER C. MP.

The number of Volunteers in camp last night was smaller than on any other night since the camp opened, 'probably owing to the fact that many of the men stopped away for the night to get fit for the exertions of the field day to be held tomorrow. Yesterday afternoon an interesting lecture on gunnery was given by a Lieutenant of the Royal Engineers, and this morning both half companies were busy with the guns. The maxim firing, at about 550 yards range, was not at all bad and showed that the Volunteer gun layers would be decidedly dangerous to face at that distance. The camp was even quieter than ever last evening, the only amusement being a short impromptu concert at which Sergeant-Major Logan was one of the There are residents who spend their time principal entertainers.
